

EVALUATION SERVICES ON BEHALF OF THE JOHNSON & JOHNSON SCHOOL NURSE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

As a continuation of Project 159, this project provided evaluation services on behalf of the Johnson & Johnson School Nurse Fellowship Program (J&J SNFP). The J&J SNFP is an annual week-long training program held at Rutgers University that provides professional education to school nurses on drug- and alcohol-related problems and other behavioral health issues among students. Each nurse's administrator had to attend the program for two days; during this time, nurses and administrators examined ways to implement new prevention and education strategies. Under the current project, we completed data collection, analysis, and report-writing for the 2006 SNFP nurse and administrator cohort.
